ABSTRACT

Intended to provide an overview of available resources, the annotated bibliography contains 88 references to major resources on women and education. Most entries were published during the 1970s. The bibliography is designed for school personnel, researchers, parents, citizens, and members of women's organizations who want to know what programs, services, and materials are available to overcome sexism. It is presented in four parts. Part one lists 63 resources, alphabetically by title, which are books, reports, or bibliographies. These include bibliographies of Black and Chicano women, a research guide to women's issues, and a guide to non-sexist children's books. The books are grouped according to general educational level or a comprehensive overview. Part two presents five journals about research and women's studies. Part three identifies 13 newsletters and resource publications. Part four describes seven library collections emphasizing women, their history, and relevant social and political issues. (AV)

INTRODUCTION

This is the first in a bibliography series to be issued by the Women's Educational Equity Communications Network (WEECN). We intend that these bibliographies will organize the diverse resources on women and education for groups such as:

- school personnel who want to know what materials and strategies are available to overcome sexism and provide equal educational opportunity for girls and women;
- researchers who want to know what aspects of sexism have been investigated and with what results;
- parents and citizens who want to know what is being done and what they can do to make equal education a reality;
- members of women's organizations, centers, and professional groups who want to know what programs, services, and resources are available.

This initial bibliography is intended to provide an introductory overview of major resources. The books and reports listed are predominantly bibliographies or works that contain extensive resource lists and/or reference information; many are available in local libraries. The journals chosen for inclusion are specifically designed to provide access to the research literature on women and education. The newsletters and resource publications identified are significantly concerned with women in education. The library collections included represent some of the major holdings of women's materials, primarily of interest to the researcher.

This first bibliography suggests the diversity of resources rather than attempting to list them comprehensively. Later bibliographies in the series will focus on specific topics and issues in depth. The large number of human resources (e.g., information centers, organizations, and associations) presently existent in the field of women's educational equity will be addressed in a future WEECN publication.

Our special thanks to Lisa Hunter, Director, Women's Equity Proposal Development Project, Far West Laboratory; Margaret Wilkerson, Director, Center for the Continuing Education of Women, University of California, Berkeley; and Margaret Collins, Director, Center for Research on Women, Stanford University, for reviewing our first bibliography and making valuable suggestions.

*About the Women's Educational Equity Communications Network—*WEECN is an information service and communication system established in 1977 and operated by the Far West Laboratory for the U.S. Office of Education. As an information service, WEECN collects, screens, classifies, stores, and provides information on projects and materials related to women's educational equity. As a communication system, WEECN facilitates contact among persons, groups, and agencies who are working on behalf of women's educational equity. Users of WEECN include teachers, administrators, counselors, curriculum specialists, preservice and inservice trainers, researchers, students, parents, and citizens.
